Trieft, Oct. 18. A Conspiracy has been discovered which was formed against the Imperial Commission established in Marlaguid. The Conspirators were already upon their March to massacre the Commissioners, which were then at Zelten; but these Lords having had timely Notice of it, retired in the Night to the Count d'Alhemir's Castle, from whence they were escorted the next Day to the Port Caslopagh. Strict Enquiry is made to discover the Authors of this Plot, who under the Pretence of being a free People, will not suffer any Imperial Garrison amongst them.

The Translation of an Advertisement in the Vienna Gazette of Oct. 23.

Several News Writers, and among others, two German Gazetteers, in the Article of Vienna of September 30, have published without any Ground, that two Years had come, thither from Russia to implore the Intercession of the Emperor that they might remain in their Convents, for as much as the Russian Court had resolved to reduce the Convents of the Roman Catholic Religion in Russia to the Number of 30, and to lessen their Revenues. . . . These Reports are false and absurd, and every one that knows the World is sensible that there are no Roman Catholic Convents in Russia; and consequently, the Reduction of those Convents, and the retrenching of their Revenues is not practicable there: Thus it is Remark promised to such as shall discover the Authors of these false News, that they may be punished for their Temerity. The following

Paris, Oct. 30. On the 24th Instant the Marquess d'Alegre set out from this City with a great Retinue for St. Brieu, where he is to preside for the King in the Assembly of the States of Brittain, the opening whereof, which was to have been this Month, has been put off to the 6th Day of the next. This Lord carries along with him 80 Officers belonging to his Bed-Chamber, Kitchen, and Table, besides those of his Equipage, which is very Magnificent. He has sent before him 6000 Bottles of Burgundy, 2000 of Champagne, and has ordered that no Expences should be spared for the better entertaining of the Nobility of that Country. 'Tis computed that the Hundred Thousand Livres given him for that Commission will hardly defray half the Charge he will be at. The Duke of Orleans studies every Day with great Application, History, Politics, Mathematicks, and generally all Arts and Sciences becoming a Prince of his Birth, wherein he makes a considerable Progress; for all which he has the ablest Masters: The Abbot Vertot reads History to him two Hours every Day. M. Grassin, Director of the Mint, has sent Circular Letters, pursuant to Orders from Court, to all Changers of this City, injoyning them to bring each of them to the Mint a certain Sum of Money, of which they will receive the Value as soon as the new Specie is coined, in Default whereof they will lose their Places. A private Person having converted into Annuities a great Quantity of Liquidations he was possessed of, he took into his Head to lay them all out upon the King's Life. A Book has lately been published here, composed by the Jesuits, which invalidates the Ordination of the English Clergy. The young Gentleman who was found dead some Days ago in a Well, and supposed to have been an English Gentleman, is now known to be the Son of a famous Italian Banker, who dealt here in Stocks: His Friends could not account for his disappearing, knowing that he had about two Millions in Paper in his Pocket-Book, whereas others supposed that he had failed. His Death is attributed to his Familiarity with a Woman of Pleasure that lived in the House where he was found dead; and what strengthens that Suspicion, is, that the same Woman left the House soon after he was milled, and though she was known to be Poor before, she has since made a great Figure, and purchased an Estate. Upon the whole, the Archbishops are now in quest of her.
